Jon Hall and Subjective Wellbeing part 3

Posted on 21 October 2011
Links to Part 1 and Part 2

In his presentation, Jon said that it is important to look at subjective wellbeing or happiness, along with more objective measures because the two can tell different stories about happiness and wellbeing.

Jon gave an example from a field called behavioural economics to demonstrate his point.

The example looked at unemployment and happiness and life partners. It showed you would be happiest when both you and your partner are employed - this is what you would probably expect. To read more click here

Return to Home

Comments

No Comments Found

Subject:
Jon Hall and Subjective Wellbeing part 3
Name:
Email:
Add Comment:

What is MAP 2.0 all About?

Search
Search this Blog

Recent Entries
The consultation continues...
Our last regular blog post
Blog contributions

Recent Comments
Towards Q2: Tomorrow&
'Things that matter
'Things that matter

Archive
November 2011 (4)
October 2011 (13)
September 2011 (91)
August 2011 (6)
July 2011 (1)
April 2011 (3)

© Australian Bureau of Statistics 2011 All Rights Reserved | Privacy Policy | Disclamer and Terms of Use | Contact Us